Scuba divers sign language manual pdf free printable version download

Join the thumb and index to form a cycle and extend the third, fourth and fifth fingers. Not only does swimming slowly make more fun, but it also helps to avoid hyperventilation and other dangerous underwater behaviors. You should then put an end to the dive and start a slow and controlled climb to the surface. A diver who communicates a problem under water should therefore indicate the source of the problem using the index finger. When you dive with your friends and you need to communicate underwater, knowing that these 20 hand-water dive signals can really come in handy and, above all, keep you safe. Although recreational divers should never plan to dive without proper training, this sign is useful in the unlikely event that a diver accidentally exceeds their limit of non-decompression for a dive and must communicate the need for an emergency decompression stop. The signal "As here" is basically the same signal that people use in everyday conversation. 11 of 20 Natalie L Gibb The hand signal "Live Off" is used to tell a diver to stay at the current depth or keep it deep. For example, when two divers are short of air and ready to go up, they can communicate that they will stay together and go up using the hand signal "Buddy Up". Continue to 5 of 20 below. The "hold" sign is a response signal to the question: a diver who reports "hold" should receive a "hold" sign in return, indicating that his divers companions understood the signal and agree to stop and maintain their position. The "UP" signal is a response signal to the question. The "OK" sign is made by joining both arms on a ring above the head, or if only one arm is free, touching the top of the head with the tip of the head eravlas eravlas ²AuP .oihccero/led enoizzailaue id amelbop nu eracinumoc ²Á "amelbop" onam a elanges led enumoc ²Áip osu²L .ieuqcabus ilaunam ilanges irtla ilged onu noc enoizaniemoc ni otazzilitu enev "adnamoD" elanges ll and increase diver safety by allowing a diver to express complex ideas or problems. A diver who signals "up" to a fellow diver should receive the "up" signal in return so that he can be sure that the signal was understood. It's a very important second language for anyone who dives. Instructors use this signal to tell enthusiastic students to swim slowly and enjoy the incredible underwater world. This signal can be used as both a question and a response. The "OK" sign is a demand-response signal, meaning that if one diver asks another diver if he is OK, he must respond with either an "OK" signal in return or with the communication that something is wrong. For these reasons, it is imperative that a diver who begins to feel excessively chilled communicate the problem using the "I'm cold" signal, end the dive, and begin his ascent to the surface with his dive buddy. 14 of 20 Natalie L Gibb The "decompression" hand signal is commonly made in one of two ways:AAeither with an extended pinkie or with an extended pinkie and thumb (similar to a "hang loose" sign). 04 of 20 Natalie L Gibb A thumbs-up sign communicates "up" or "end the dive." The "up" signal is one of the most important signals in scuba diving. Plus his herÁ Ábody will not eliminate absorbed nitrogen efficiently. 18 of 20 Natalie L Gibb The "bubbles" or "leak" signal communicates that a diver has noticed a leaking seal or bubbling piece of gear either on herself or her buddy.Á ÁtoÁ Ánake the "bubbles" hand signal, open and close your fingertips rapidly. Using all five fingers to point out a direction of travel helps to avoid confusion with the "look" signal, which is made by pointing with a single index finger. 16 of 20 Natalie L Gibb The "out of air" signal is taught to all open water course and experience courses.Á Ástudents so that they know how to react in the unlikely event of an out-of-air emergency. 17 of 20 Natalie L Gibb A diver makes the "I'm cold" signal Gnimotnap yb edam The oil "nwod of the etirw" eht .saw owt fo eno of "pots" etacmmoc yllacipy srevid bbig l eilatan 02 fo 70 .pots ytefas a rof emit of dednemmoer muminin eh. This signal requires an immediate response from the diver's partner, who should allow the diver out of the air to breathe from his alternating source of air air while the two divers descend together. 08 of 20 Natalie L Gibb The hand signal of the look is made indicating the index and the third fingers in your eyes and then indicating the object to be observed. The hand is held out flat and moved down. For example, the demand signal followed by the high signal communicates "We should go up?" and the question signal followed by the cold signal could be used to express "Are you cold"? 20 of 20 Natalie L Gibb When all other communications fail, divers sometimes find it easier to simply write the information to communicate about a diver or wet-note dry slate underwater. Any diver can end the dive at any point for any reason by using the high signal. The descent signal is used in the first step of the five-point descent, where divers agree that they are ready to start going deeper. The possibility of an emergency outside the air when diving is extremely low when adequate pre-dive and dive procedures are observed. It's 9 out of 20. It's 17 of 20 below. To indicate a problem the diver waves his arm over his head to ask attention. Technical divers, however, favor the sealing sign, stretching a fist with the palm-side of the fist facing out. 15 of 20 Natalie L Gibb For the signal "low in the air", place a closed fist against the chest. The first method (common in recreational immersion) is to hold a flat hand, palm ahead, as a traffic cop would do. 10 of 20 Natalie L Gibb For the hand signal "come here", extend a flattened hand, palm, and fold your fingers upward towards you. 01 of 20 Natalie L Gibb The first hand signal that most divers learn is the hand signal OK. 05 of 20The Gibb Inch-down hand signal communicates "go down" or get off under water. This signal is not frivolous. These surface communication signals involve the entire arm so that boat captains and surface support staff can be able toUnderstanding the communication of a diver from afar. 12 of 20 Natalie l Gibb a diver puts two side fingers to indicate "buddy up" or "stay together". Underwater instructors use this hand signal to remind underwater students to stay close to their underwater partner. partner.
